FONASBA Young Ship Agent or Ship Broker Award

Entry for the 2018 Award is now open

Now in its fourth year, the FONASBA Young Ship Agent or Ship Broker Award is developing into a well-respected educational initiative and the papers presented are of an extremely high standard. The full entry criteria are provided on the following pages but in summary the Award is open to any employee, aged 40 or younger, of a company that itself is a member of a FONASBA national association.

The Award is supported by our sponsors, BIMCO and ITIC and the winner of the first prize receives complimentary entry to one of BIMCO's e-learning courses and a cheque for €500.00 from ITIC. The winner is also invited to attend the FONASBA Annual Meeting to receive their award from the President. The 2018 Award will be presented in Cancun, Mexico

Each of the three winners over the first three years of the Award have found the effort of preparing, researching and writing their entry to be very rewarding and all agree that doing so stood them in good stead in terms of future career development and progression.

The winner of the inaugural Award in 2015, Renan Queiroz of Brazil, said: "I was truly honoured to be the first recipient of the Young Ship Agent of the Year Award and am absolutely sure it has played an important role in my career as it was of great value to build my résumé. At the time of entering, I was a boarding agent and am now managing a shipping agency operation in 11 ports and have no doubts winning this Award has boosted my visibility within the company. Recognition aside, all the research involved has increased my knowledge on the field, not to count all the nice people from several nationalities that I was pleased to meet during the Award Ceremony. While applying for this award may be time-consuming, it is rewarding in more ways than one".

The 2016 winner was Tim Polson MICS, of Australia, who received his Award at the London Annual Meeting. He wrote: "The primary gain from writing my submission was the motivation to research my own field of work more, and be more investigative in general. The information I uncovered was often surprising, sometimes shocking and occasionally very entertaining. The assignment made me more aware than ever that effective communication is about arranging facts in a way that is both informative and enjoyable to read. The award ceremony and chance to speak at Mansion House was an unforgettable experience, and it was great to meet the highest echelons of the shipping industry. As a result of winning this prestigious prize, I have made efforts to 'raise the bar' in terms of the quality of my work, leading to significantly improved commercial results. I was also inspired to engage in postgraduate study, and I have since completed a Graduate Certificate in Business Management with Griffith University here in Brisbane, achieving top of the class for 3 out of 4 subjects and being awarded an Academic Excellence prize. I will be continuing this study in the form of an MBA next year, likely as an academic scholarship student. Winning the FONASBA Award represented a significant and positive change in career direction for me, and has been one of my life's most rewarding experiences. I am thoroughly looking forward to reading next year's submissions"!

Niklas Soltow of Germany was the 2017 winner and attended Dubai Annual Meeting. He said: "I am very proud and honored to be among the winners of the FONASBA Young Ship Agent or Broker Award. The participation in this Award has given me quite a lot and has been rewarded in many ways. The conscious look at the specific issues of the shipping industry has broadened my knowledge. I hope this award is just at the beginning of a long and successful history and that all future winners and participants will benefit from it as much as I have".

As well as our prize winners, our sponsors BIMCO and ITIC are also convinced of the value of the Award as a means of encouraging and supporting personal and academic development.

BIMCO Deputy Secretary General Søren Larsen commented: "Representing ship brokers and agents internationally FONASBA plays a very important role in raising standards within the ship broking and agency profession as well as attracting the next generation of young shipping people to the business. BIMCO is very pleased to continue to sponsor FONASBA's Young Agent and Broker Award" that serves as an important inspiration for young shipping professionals who wish to make ship broking and agency a life time career".

For ITIC, Commercial Director Charlotte Kirk FICS said: "ITIC is pleased to sponsor the FONASBA Young Agent and Broker Award. The award recognises individuals who demonstrate their advanced knowledge of ship broking and agency. We are sure that all the winners will go on to be at the forefront of their profession".

It is clear from the testimonies given above, that whilst the Award is a significant undertaking, it certainly brings much in terms of personal and professional reward, recognition and satisfaction. We therefore hope that as many as possible of our eligible younger members will take up the challenge of entering for the 2018 Award.
